Kangaroos and Karate

Kangaroos are marsupial mammals. This means they are warm-blooded animals, and the mother has a pouch where the tiny babies develop and grow. Kangaroos are native to Australia and its neighboring islands. There are many different kinds and sizes, from rabbit size to over 7 feet tall. They have very strong back legs, small front legs and a powerful tail. They eat mainly herbs and grasses, and can go for a long time without water. For more information on kangaroos, go to the following web site.

The only marsupial native to North America is the opossum. You can see them in the Southern California area. For more information on opossums, go to this web site.

Karate is a martial art that means "empty hand" in Japanese. In other words, the hand contains no weapons. There are striking, punching, and kicking actions and open-handed techniques, and there are several levels with different colored belts which can be achieved by advanced study. Karate teaches mental health along with its physical parts. A person learns fearlessness, leadership, faithfulness, respect for others, and peacefulness. Physically, each belt levels tests position, balance, coordination, form, speed, power, reflexes, and your conclusion of what has been learned.

Which Belt is That?

In this story, Kenny makes very good progress in karate and earns a blue belt after one year. If children work very hard, it takes three months to move a belt. If they work at a regular rate, it takes four months. If they work just a little, it takes five months. The pictures of belts on the right show each level from top to bottom.

1. Rudy and Ruby both got yellow belts at the end of the school year. If they keep practicing at a regular rate to get their blue belts like Kenny, how many months will it take them?

2. Kevin, Katey, and Kandy asked Kenny for help in math. If Kenny charged $10 per hour and all three of them got help for one hour, how much money did Kenny make?

3. At the end of the year, Kenny got his blue belt. Kenny wants a black belt. Since he works very hard, how long will it take Kenny to earn his black belt?

4. Kenny, Kevin, Katey, and Kandy all went to see a movie. They all wanted to share a bag of popcorn. The small popcorn feeds one kangaroo, the medium popcorn feeds three kangaroos, the large popcorn feeds five kangaroos, and the jumbo popcorn feeds seven kangaroos. Which size of popcorn should they get?
