Let Your Voice Be Heard

When people talk about women's rights, it is usually about the freedoms given to women and girls of any age or race. Women of every nation have fought for their rights. In some nations, women still struggle for their own voice. In history, men have always had their own opinions, but the views of women were just blocked out. Some of the privileges that men have always had, but women had to earn, include the following:

- right to be independent
- right to vote
- right to work with fair wages
- right to an education
- rights of marital status
- rights of religious freedoms

Listed below are some famous women activists.

- Elizabeth Cady Stanton
- Susan B. Anthony
- Marianne Hainisch
- Kate Sheppard
- Ida B. Wells
- Hoda Shaarawi
- Dora Russell
- Shamima Shaikh
- Emily Howard Stowe

Directions: Pick one of the above famous women and find research on her using the Internet or reference material. Write at least one paragraph on what you learned about this woman. Discuss what you would have done if you had faced the same challenges. Include what you can now do to ensure that everyone is given fair and equal rights or treatment.

Discussion Prompt

For Teacher Use Only

Exercise 1:

Explain to your students exactly what an arranged marriage is and the different types that may occur using the information below. Have a discussion about arranged marriages and how your class feels about them. Come up with a “Pro/Con Chart” (see description below).

An arranged marriage is a marriage that is planned before the couple has even begun to date or even meet. Most of the time, it involves the families of the arranged couple. These marriages are not very common today, but they still do occur more often in parts of Africa, Asia, and the Middle East.

There are three kinds of arranged marriages. In a forced marriage, the parents plan everything, and their son or daughter has absolutely no say in the matter. In a traditional arranged marriage, the son or daughter has very little say in the marriage arrangement. They are allowed to call off the marriage, but there is usually strong pressure from the parents to do what they have arranged. Modern arranged marriages are also prepared by the parents. However, the parents choose several people for their son or daughter to pick from. They are all sent on dates. Then the son or daughter picks the person they like best. In this type of arranged marriage, the parents’ primary concern is their son or daughter’s wishes.

Exercise 2:

Directions: Have each student answer the following questions and then discuss them as a class.

1. Would you consider an arranged marriage? If yes, what type of arranged marriage would you choose?
2. How do you think you would feel if your parents arranged your marriage to someone you did not even know?

Your Family Tree

The Tudor family played important roles in making England a powerful country that would dominate much of the world in the future centuries. Use the royal Tudor family tree as an example to make your family tree at home. Ask your parents for any information they already know about your family. Use the Internet to research your family history. There are even websites to help you make your family tree. Draw your family tree on the back of this worksheet.
